OFFICE OF CLERK OF COURTS, PITTEBURG, February 21, 1889.

DAVID K. McGUNNEGLE, Clerk.

FAMOUS FIRST LADIES

The Mistresses of the Executive Mansion During the Past Century.

But Staved at Home While George Was Inaugurated as President.

MRS. TAYLOR'S HABIT OF SMOKING

The Thirtieth inauguration that the country has witnessed is over. Inauguration day, except in a few cases, has always been an occasion of great display and ceremony. But what would the country say to-day if Mrs. Harrison had remained in Indianapolis instead of accompanying her husband to Washington?

Had she done this she would have only been following in the footsteps of an illustrious predecessor, who was none other than the first lady of the land and the wife of the father of his country. George Washington was mangurated in New York, and a week later held a reception which the elite of the city attended, and though beauty and gayety were there in full force Martha was not. She didn't like balls, and as there was dancing on this occasion this may have been her reason for remaining away. Mrs. Washington

REMAINED AT MOUNT VERNON until May 17—nearly three weeks after the inauguration, then left home in her own carriage, accompanied by her grandchildren, Eleanor Custis and George Washington P. Custis, with a small equestrian escort. She was entertained at Philadelphia by Robert Morris, and at Elizabethtown by Coverne William Living the control of Governor William Livingston and his daughters. Here she was met by her husdaughters. Here she was met by her hus-band in a splendid barge, and she landed in New York under a salute of 13 guns. Mrs. Washington held the first of her levees on the 29th of May, a month after the inaugu-ration, and they were continued every Fri-cay evening from 8 till 10. The wite of John Adams was a lady of higher social position than her husband at higher social position than her husband at the time of their marriage in 1764. Her maiden name was Abigail Smith, and she was a social favorite in the town where she was born and reared. There is no record of an inaugural ball either in Adams' or Jef-set with bird of paradise plumes. She wore shockingly low gowns. She dressed to please other people. Mrs. Madison was of a sunny nature, and her turban was always consplcuous. She painted and patched and powdered.

Mrs. Monroe was an elegant and accomplished woman. She was Miss Elizabeth Kortright, a native of New York City. She and her sister were belles during the Revolutionary war, and were courted by both American and British officers, and Elizabeth was ridiculed for not making a better beth was ridiculed for not making a better match, but this was before her husband became President FIRST MISTRESS OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

When John Quincy Adams was inaugurated, March 4, 1825, his wife was in such delicate health that a punch bowl, set out for his private friends, was the chief attraction. tion of inauguration evening. Mrs. Adams had given a ball, but it was during the administration of President Mouroe, while her husband was Mouroe's Secretary of State. It was a gorgeous affair. Her dress was of steel liama and her throat and arms in at the ever-open door and introduce them-

Tyler succeeded to the office he made the White House the center of social gayety. Miss Letitia Christian Tyler, the President's first wite, was still living, but the state of her health required that she should delegate her semi-official duties to some member of her family. These finally devolved upon Mrs. Robert Tyler, who was a daughter of Cooper, the tragedian. During the time that Mrs. Virginia Cooper Tyler acted as Mrs. Tyler's deputy some of the most noteworthy receptions were given that ever took place in the White House. One of the early social events of the Tyler administration was the children's fancy dress ball that President Tyler gave in honor of the birthday of his eldest granddaughter. Dressed as a fairy, with gossamer wings, wearing a diamond star on her forehead and holding a silver wand, she welcomed her guests to fairy-land. The President's third daughter was married in the White House on the last day of Janin the White House on the last day of January, 1842, the wedding being, of course, a

MRS. POLK AS A HOSTESS.

Mrs. Polk, who is still living, was 41 years old when she entered the White House from the Potomac side, and it probably is a fact that no resident of Washington has ever seen him leave the White House on fooi or walk about the city. Those who are the nearest to Cleveland say that he is superstitious, and that he has always been haunted with the dread of some new Guiteau.

She May Have Forgetten.

Nerristown Berald.1

Anna Dickinson says there is nothing higher than poetry and music. It is manifest that never failed to please.

President Taylor's life in the White "height of the season."

House can scarcely be called a social success. His experience had been almost wholly of the camp, and his wife and even his youngest daughter, "Betty," had shared his nomadic existence. In the society of fashionable ladies the President was awkeward, and Mrs. Taylor was so averse to the duties imposed upon her by her position that she was accustomed to pass the time sitting patiently in her own room plying her knitting needles and occasionally smoking her pipe. Mrs. Bliss (Betty) in consequence did the honors of the establishment "with the artlessness of a rustice belle and the grace of a duchess."

To Mr. and Mrs. Fillmore there was nothing possible except the routine life of the. White House. Before her marriage Abigail Fillmore had been a teacher, and she was always a student. It is to her credit that to her personal needs was due the fact that Congress was induced for the first time to supply books as part of the furniture of the Executive Mansion. Mrs. Fillmore's health while she was hostess of the White House was delicate, and she never aimed to become a social leader. MRS. WASHINGTON DIDN'T DANCE,

MRS. PIERCE AND HARRIET LANE.

President and Mrs. Pierce greatly relaxed the etiquette of the White House.
Old New Hampshire friends holding clerkships in Washington not only were not forgotten, but were visited by Mrs. Pierce and invited to dine at the President's table.
This accomplished lady came to Washington suffering under the weight of a heavy bereavement—the death of her only son in a railroad accident a few weeks before.
Mrs. Pierce as lady of the White House left many agreeable memories behind her, but enteebled by sorrow and in delicate health she performed her public duties with the least possible ostentation.

Harriet Lane, the President's niece, acted

Harriet Lane, the President's niece, acted as mistress of the White House during the next four years. She was born in the Cumberland valley, and had been carefully educated, had long been an inmate of her uncle's household and possessed a large experience of society, having been the hostess of the American Embassy while Mr. Buchanan was Minister to England. She performed her duties with grace and distinction.

The White House during President Lincoln's incumbency was not gay. Mrs. Lin-coln was ambitious, but she was singularly ill-fitted to be a President's wife. Hospi-tality to her was a burden. She was dis-inclined to observe the social requirements of her verition. She was recognized but of her position. She gave receptions, but they were cold and formal and generally re-sorted to by strangers in Washington.

Andrew Johnson's wife was an invalid and his daughter, Mrs. Martha Johnson-Patterson, acted as the mistress of the Executive Mansion. She was an educated and accomplished lady.

Mrs. Grant as mistress of the White House was always unobtrusive, and at first Jefferson's wife, at the time he became President, had been dead 10 years, yet the White House was not without its attractions of female beauty. Mrs. Madison and the Secretary of State stayed with the President while his own house was getting ready. Jefferson's daughter, Martha Randolph, mother of Mrs. Merkleham, recently deceased, of this city, lent a charm to the beauty circle. Jefferson's other daughter visited the White House only once. She had married a Mr. Epps, of Virginis, who was afterward a Senator. She died during Jefferson's administration.

The first inauguration of James Madison took place on the 4th of March, 1809. His wife, Dolly Madison, had been a favorite figure at the White House in Jefferson's sterile times. The inauguration bail was a grand affair. Mrs. Madison wore a gorgeous robe of buff velvet. It is said that she moved and looked like a queen. She wore full strings of pearls upon her neck and arms, and on her head was a Paris turban, set with bird of paradise plumes. She wore shockingly low gowns. She dressed to please other people. Mrs. Madison was of a decomplished lady.

Mrs. Grant as mistress of the White House was always unobtrusive, and at first her official receptions and dinners passed off without any great celat. They increased in brilliancy, however, as the years went by. The one great social event of President any great eelat. They increased if without any great eelat. They increased if brilliancy, however, as the years went by. The one great social event of President such the with the House of his administration was the matriage in 1874 in the great East Room of the White House of his only daughter, Miss Nellie Arms and affair. White House of his only daughter, Miss Nellie Arms and affair was a grand affair. White House of his only daughter, Miss Nellie Arms and Arthur was too young to assume the duties of hostess of the White House, and these devolved upon the President's sister, Mrs. McElroy. She, however, was able to give comparatively little time to her brother's household, but the ladies of his cabinet came to the President's rescue.

As President Cleveland was a bachelor he installed his sister, Miss Rose Elizabeth. Cleveland, as hostess of the White House. She held this place until Frances Folsom Cleveland came to do the honors. That she has been as capable and charming a mistress as the mansion ever had goes without saying.

MRS. HARRISON AS A HOUSEWIFE. A Remarkable Quilt of Patchwork That She Has Planned.

Indianapolis Journal. Mrs. Harrison will be missed in the social circles of the city. She is one of the most was of steel liama and her throat and arms were covered with glittering cut steel ornaments. Her kid gloves, reaching to the elbow, were so fine that they were imported in the shell of an English walnut. Her hair was rolled high and decked with ostrich feathers. General Jackson was there, a devoted beau, in blue coat, brass buttons and pumps. It is said that Webster and Calhoun indulged in the dance upon this occasion. Mrs. Adams was the first lady who resided at the White House.

General Jackson felt a gloom, which spread over society, on the death of his wife, which was not suggestive of balls and gayety; but there was some gay company in and around the White House.

For some months after President Van Buren took possession of the Executive Mansion the White House was without a mistress. Mrs. Van Buren had been dead many years, but in 'November, 1837, Colonel Abram Van Buren, the President's son and Private Secretary, married Angelica Singleton, of South Carolina, who had spent the previous winter in Washington in the family of her relative, Senator Preston.

gleton, of South Carolina, who had spent the previous winter in Washington in the family of her relative, Senator Preston. She was a lady of great beauty of face and charm of manner, and by her vivacity and accomplishments was admirably fitted to shine in the position her marriage gave her.

IN TYLER'S TIME.

At the time William Henry Harrison was inaugurated Mrs. Harrison, his aged wife, was in feeble health when he left his home at North Bend for Washington, and she was destined never to be actively the mistress of the White House. On the 4th of April, just one month from his insuguration, President Harrison died. When Tyler succeeded to the office he made the White House the center of social gayety. by visitors, she worked in the studio. She does not intend to let this pleasure of paintdoes not intend to let this pleasure of painting be entirely neglected while living in Washington, but among her carefully packed articles are her accountrements of art. She has already planned for the better preservation of the many badges, not only of this campaign, but those of 1840, which have been sent to General Harrison and herself to make a unite not a correspond to herself to make a quilt, not a crary patch by any means, but a carefully arranged souvenir of their experience of 1888.
